CHRISTMAS RAMBLES. Where Santa Claus Reigns Suprem Perseverance, energy and tact are three of the great factors necessary to the success of any business or enterprise. These truisms were forcibly injected into the writer's thinking cap as he traversed the floors of Dansiger's beautiful stores, on Sixth street and Penn avenue. To describe all the handsomely pretty things seen is certainly beyond his power, and will merely picture a bird's eye view, strongly advising everybedy to do as he did, go and see for yourselves. It'll amply pay you, you'll be enjoyably gratified. Well, on entering these handsome storerooms from main entrance, 48 Sixth street, and walking half way up the aisle, no need to reing half way up the aisle, no need to re-mind one that the merry Christmas season is again upon us. Here it is staring you right in the face—elegant magnificence, regal splendor. From all the principal private and Government potteries in England, France, Germany, Saxony and Austria are rare, rich and lovely specimens of high-class art pottery in vases, statuary, candelabra, pitchers, urns and thousands of other pleasing and attractively adorning knick-knacks so dear to the hearts of lovers of the beautiful in household art decoration. Here are also some splendid specimens of Italian sculpture in Parian marble. Likewise a very excellent collection of rich cut glass. Turning to the right we are con-fronted by an amazingly beautiful exposition of bronzes. Artistic beauty fairly revels in these life-like and true to nature productions in bronzes. Immediately oppo-site and at the bottom of the grand staircase—which of itself is a pretty and notable feature in these lovely stores, being an ex-act reproduction of the beautiful staircase of the House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.-is situated the jewelry and silverware department, and judging by the vast crowds surrounding the four counters this must be a very popular resort for Christmas presents? Upstairs at present is devoted to plush, leather and oxidized al-bums, manicure sets, work boxes, toilet sets presents. Right here we were pleasantly surprised at the elegant display of ladies' and children's wraps, also the wonderful and comfortable looking collection of furs from every clime beneath the sun! Descending by the elevator we land in basement. Here is where Santa Claus loves best to reign supreme, the place where the little folks are made happy. Surely if toys make children happy—and who so bold to assert the contrary—then they say go to Danziger's, for there you will find every conceivable toy besides a great many that are inconceivable! He had almost forget to mention the wonderful doll family; there's thousands of them here, from the tiny, wee, modest dollie up to the handsome Imperial doll, princesses. And the library, well, the budding intellect of young America, can be supplied with a great variety of high close by advising all hunting Christmas presents to visit Danziger's, for it seems to us what you can't get there, you can't get

Then the games, why, there's hundreds of different ones, and we have no doubt they will be the means of producing real, un-adulterated, genuine fun, enjoyment and amusement to thousands, both old and

THE NEWSBOYS' CHRISTMAS Made Happy by the Kindness of a Well-Known Company. Should the needy be forgotten during the Christmas festivities? is a question that is answered properly by the Henry G. Allen Co., the well-known publisher of the Encyclopedia Britannica. This company intend to make this Christmas one that will be long remembered by the newsboys of Pittsburg and Allegheny, for they will give each of them a handsome sailor cap for a Christmas present which will make our boys look like a uniformed brighter when set off by a pretty and becoming little cap.

The distribution will be made Christmas morning through Superintendent Druitt, of the Newsboys' School. The caps are substantial and decidedly superior in character to anything previously distributed in Pitts-
